ilt will all be right in the morning,"

When the bounding best of the heart of love,
And the springing step grow slow;
When the form of a cloud in the blue above,
Lies dark on the path below,
The song that he sings is lost in a sigh,
And he returns where a star is dawning.
And he thinks, as it gladdens his heart and his eye,
"It will all be right in the morning!"

When the battle is done, the harp unstrong,
Its music trembling—dying.
When his woes are unwept, and his deeds unsang,
And he longs in the grave to be lying.
Then a Voice shall charm, as it had charmed before
He had wept or waiting the dawning;
"To do love there for ave, I'b be thine as of yore,"
"It will all be right in the morning."
